Succeed General Duane,

Colonel Casey was born at Madison Barracks, Sackett's Harbor, New York, and was the eldest child of General Silas Casey, U.S. A. He was graduated at the West Point Military Academy July 1, 1852, standing No. 1 in his class, and was assigned to the Corps of Engineers. He served during the following two years upon the defenses of Fort Delaware and the river and harbor improvements of Delaware River and Bay. From 1854 to 1859 he was stationed at West Point as assistant professor in practical, civil and military engineering.
From 1869 to 1861 he was in command of sappers and miners (engineer soldiers) on Procee Scound and in Westington Tests practical, civil and military engineering. From 1850 to 1861 he was in command of sappers and miners (engineer soldiers) on Puget Sound and in Washington Territory. During the war of the rebellion he was principally engaged in the construction of sea coast defenses in New England (Maine and New Hampshire), and served for a time on the staff of the general commanding the Department of Virginia and on special duty at the attack on Fort Fisher, December, 1864. He was brevoted lieutenant-colonel and colonel for faithful and meritorious services during the rebellion. From 1867 to 1877 he was in charge of the Division of Fortifications in the Engineer Department at Washington, and in the latter year he was placed in charge of public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, the Washington Aqueduct and the construction of the State, War and Navy Building. In 1868 he was sent to Europe to examine the system of torpedo defenses adopted by Great Britain, Germany and Austria. In 1878 he was appointed engineer of the Washington National Monument and completed that structure in December of 1884. On November 1, 1886, he was assigned as president of the Board of Engineers in New York city, upon which duty he is now engaged.

THE TAX SALE OFF.

Numerous Complications Arising-The District's Probable Loss. The postponement of the tax sale, referred to in Saturday's CEITIC, has complicated matters considerably at the Commissioners' office. The question now missioners' office. The question now arises whether the District will not lose the $1,300 which it cost to advertise the property. In case this cost is charged against the property, suits will probably be instituted against the District. There is one instance where the cost of advertising a piece of property amounted to nearly $50. Before the property can be sold it will have to be readvertised.

A number of persons appeared at the

A number of persons appeared at the Collector's office to-day to pay the arrears, but they did not want to pay the cost of advertising, as it is not considered a legal charge. Attorney Riddie will be asked to render an opinion on this question.

The special assessments were made for charge. Attorney Riddle will be asked to render an opinion on this question.

The special assessments were made for work done by the Board of Public Works. When not paid within thirty days after being made, liens were issued on the property bearing 10 per cent. Subsequently 8 per cent. or greenback certificates were issued to pay contractors, and liens were pledged to pay the certificates. The First National Bank of New York bought nearly all the 8 per cents and still holds them. In 1874 Congress required all future issues of lien certificates to go to the Commissioner of the Sinking Fund, who is the Treasurer of the United States, and the proceeds to be applied to the redemption of the 8 per cent. certificates of indebtedness.

Demand was recently made by the Treasurer as the holder of the liens that the delinquent property should be advertised and sold to satisfy the liens and thus pay the 8 per cen's. The first installment was advertised to be sold on the 10th inst. While the advertisement was running, Congress interposed and passed an act allowing the delinquents to pay 6 per cent, instead of 10 per cent, up to November 1.

It was this action of Congress that pre-

SOMETHING OF CITY LIFE.

Little Known. Some day looking through an alley or around the corner of a quiet side street you may have seen a little knot of negro men and boys bending over around some-may have seen a little knot of negro men and boy's bending over around something on the ground, all intensely interested and oblivious to everything save what goes on in the centre of the group. You may notice that at each of the corners that one would have to pass to see the little knot of gamblers—for that's what they are—there is a negro man or boy whose eyes scrutinize every passer-by, and if anything in your actions should give color to the suspicion that you are a policeman in citizen's clothes, or a detective, or if a policeman appears, the negro on the corner will sing out a nusical "Ho-o—o-o Pete," as near as cold type will indicate it, and the knot of eager gamblers will vanish around corners and into alleys as if by magic.

If you got close enough to see over the shoulders of the players you would see one of them, the player, taking a pair of dice in his hand, throwing them out on the ground with a peculiar motion of his hand and wrist, mumbling to himself as he did so some mystic formula "for luck." This is the winsome and seductive game of "crap," so fascinating to the pickaninny gambler. If the negro who is "shooting" throws the dice so that the sum of all the spots up is 7 or 11 an expression of exulting joy spreads over his face, for he kas won the "pot" the first thing. If not, he has another chance. He continues to "shoot" the dice out on the bricks until either the number of spots first thrown or until the mystic 7 spots, one or the other, are thrown, when he loses, if the 7 is thrown first, or wins if it is not. Outside bets are made by the onlookers, and the interest rivals that taken in a horse race by more reputable onlookers, and the interest rivals that taken in a horse race by more reputable gambiers.

Sometimes the police succeed in out-

Sometimes the police succeed in out-witting the "looker-out," as he is called, and make a rush for the "crap" devotees, when they are pretty sure to get one or two of the "talent." Those who escape immediately manugurate a still hunt for the "looker-out," whom they have paid to give them timely warning in case the police appear, and he gets a drabbing that his quondam employers consider commensurate with the enormity of his crime.

What an Outraged Citizen Suffered When He Dared Assert His Rights. Charlie Towle of the Boston Travelle tells a good story on William Dickson, a rominent citizen of this city. It seems that Mr. Dickson was going home one ght rather late, somewhere in the wee ma hours, and up in the neighborhood of Fourteenth and G streets met three or our young fellows, stable boys who had been attending the races then in progress, and were in town on a lark. They in-quired of Mr. Dickson the way to Foun-dry alley, and he, out of a spirit of ac-commodation, walked down the street a commodation, walked down the street a few paces and pointed out the way. They thanked him and walked off, and Mr. Dickson turned away to resume his course. He had gone but a little ways when a policeman jumped out from behind a tree-box and collared him. "I've got you at last!" he said, as he grabbed him. "I've been layin' for you for some time, so come along!" "What do you mean?" asked the astonished Mr. Dickson. "I mean I am going to run you in." son. "I mean I am going to run you in," replied the zealous minion of the law; "this robbing of clothes-lines has been going on around here long enough!"
"But you didn't see me robbing any clothes-lines "".

"But you didn't see me robbing any clothes-lines?"

"That's all right. You are the chief of the gang and was directing those other fellows; so come along?" "Well, you are a dad-fool!" said Mr. Dickson, and immediately let in to give the officer a cursing. "Shut up now, or I'll bat you one," responded the cop, drawing his club to suit action to the threat. Finding remonstrance to be in vain he accompanied the officer to the then Fifth Precinct, walking by his side. Going down the Avenue they met a friend of Mr. Dickson's, who without guessing the state of affairs, playfully called out. "Ah, Bill, they ve got you at last!" This made the policeman doubly sure he had captured a prize, so he marched him over to the station. It was during Lieutenant "Dick" Arnold's administration of that precinct, and he was naturally surprised to see his old friend Dickson "run in." When the policeman explained matters Lieutenant Arnold saw it was a mistake and said, "That's all right, Mr. Dickson, you can go. This is a new man and he has made a big mistake." "But I don't intend to go," replied the enraged Dickson. "Let him prefer a charge against me. This is a fine note, to arrest a citizen without any cause. Prefer a charge and I will ventilate this thing in court to-morrow."

"All right," replied the officer, "I put the charge of profanity against him."

It was done, and Mr. Dickson had to forfeit $5 collateral the next day.

It was too Much for the Rural Visitor. At a rendition of Miss Winston's presentation of "Fra Diavolo" recently at Albaugh's, a quite pretty young lady, from rural parts, brought down the house by exclaiming, and the dead slience with which the audience with nessed the undressing of Zerlina, preparatory to retiring, and listened to her exquisite music, and as she appeared to be in the act of removing her last covering, "Goodness Gracious!" all around burst into such firepressible laughter at the young lady's consternation that it "contaged" the house.

President Flores' Visit. Antonio Flores, Ecuador's new prent, is expected here early this week He is quite well known in Washington society, having represented Ecuador during President Arthur's administration. Senor Romero, the Mexican Minister, has received a letter from President Flores which says that the date of his arrival depends upon President Cleveland's decision as to when he will be received. His arrival is good, and his stay in this city health is good, and his stay in this city will be brief.

Of Interest to the Duke and Duchess of Mariborough.
The legal aspect of the marriage of the Duke and Duchess of Mariborough is be ginning to excite discussion and gossit in New York, and the lawyers are with holding opinions at present until they have more thoroughly studied the law of the case. It is held that the Duke, as far

"Every marriage contract in violation of the provision of this section shall, except in the case provided for in the next section (which relates only to marriages during a five years absence of husband or wife) be absolutely void."

Several marriages similar to that of the Duke and Mrs. Hamersley have been declared void in that State, and it is thought this one would also be so held. In England, however, the marriage would be considered valid, and English law, contrary to the law in New York, holds that the domicile goes with the subject, and that the Duke is and has always been domiciled in England, and is in no sense a citizen of any other country.

"A person who knowingly enters into a marriage with another which is prohibited to the latter by the foregoing provisions of this chapter is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary or State prison for not more than five years or by a fine of not more than $1,000, or both."

It is a pretty mix, in any event, and the only way out of it is for Mr, and Mrs. Marlborough to marry again in England, also in the continental countries, and aiso in the continental countries, and then come back to America and marry in all the States in which they can do so, and sedulously avoid visiting those States whose puritanical and oid-fogy statutes render them liable to be sent to the penitentiary for bigamy if some envious person takes a notion to prosecute them. In the meantime Mayor Hewitt, as accessory before the fact, had better take to the woods, and Speaker Carlisle and Benton McMillin and Timothy J. Campbell, as his coadjutators in crime, will do well to introduce some sort of legislation by which they n'ay be secured from punlet their Revised Statutes loose on the London, July 9 .- The new Duchess of Lospox, July 9.—The new Duchess of Marlborough arrived in London this afternoon. She was cordially received by her mother-in-law, Lady Randolph Churchill, and others, the Duke having written in advance that the attitude of the Duchess' relations in New York toward himself made it very desirable that his own relations in London should receive her with special cordiality.

A Candidate's Trials.

Says an Indianapolis special to the Nev York Sun: General Harrison has begun to experience his trials. Of course he hears nothing here but adulation. He sees his portraits in almost numberless windows, but he hears the approaching thunder of the advancing Democratic forces. Then, too, he has to endare such petty annoyances as beholding badly-printed badges bearing the legend: "What's the matter with Harrison" and if there is anything more than another that the good man despises it is slang. Another source of tribulation to him is the sight of an alleged bust of his grandfather in the headquarters of the State Committee. One man will enter the room and say, "Hello, there's a bust of Henry Clay!" Another will recognize it is as a likeness of Speaker Carlisle. It has been called everything but Old Tippecanoe, and when a score of times a day it is necessary to explain that it is he, it becomes trying to the nerves. To-day some wag circulated cards bearing the words: "Grandpa's pants are too big for Ben." hears nothing here but adulation,

An Old "Tippecanoe" Recipe. Boston Herald: Mrs. Hayes' cold wate administration on the feminine side of the Presidential establishment is well remembered, and now we are told that Mrs Harrison "possesses the secret of making the most seductive and delightful clare punch ever tasted in political life. It is prepared after the old "Tippecanoe" recipe, and it is a drink fit for the gods." It is not within the bounds of reason to suppose that this secret would be allowed to run to waste after her husband's exal-

"Q" dynamite case. Few members of the Brotherhood were about the headquarters in the National Hotel. Chairman Hoge was out the greater part of the afternoon with his family, and the few callers at his rooms were turned away.
In the office of the United States Marshal there were no signs of anything being done, and the headquarters of the Burlington Road were closed. The incendiary circular—in which it is alleged Chairman Hoge of the Burlington Strikers' Grievance Committee invited members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Ffremen to apply for work on the Burlington and to come prepared with sal soda and emery, to the end that if given employment they might ruin the engines committed to their care—will play a very important part in the sensational proceedings that are likely to be the outcome of the present agitation.

It is not decided by the rairroad official whether a suit will be instituted for conspiracy for its issuance or not. While railroad officials will say nothing about the testimony which they possess upon any of the interesting points, it was learned that they place much confidence in the circular to relieve them from any insincerity that may have arisen in the public mind. The circular, it is claimed, came into the hands of Freight Agent Morton, indirectly from the engineer of a railroad other than the "Q," running into Chicago, and a Brotherhood man.
But few copies had been sent out when knowledge of the circular and its criminal advice came to Chiefs Arthur and Sargeant.

Norton, the manager of the Grand Opera-House and the Olympic Theatre of St. Louis, have cloped. It is stated that the couple have been unduly intimate for over a year, but this was not known to Mr. Norton until Thursday last, when the fact was conveyed to him through an anonymous letter. On Thursday evening Norton met Moore and Mrs. Norton at the corner of Locust and Jefferson avenues, in the western part of the city, and attempted to shoot Moore, but he was disarmed by a friend, who was passing at the time. Mrs. Norton on Friday removed her money and other valuables, amounting ling to about $20,000, from the Safe Deposit Company, and, at 10 o'clock Friday night, she and Moore left the city in a carriage. onnaging editor of the Post-Disputch, and

The expose which led to the elopement The expose which led to the elopement occurred last Thursday evening when Norton, who had been informed of improper relations between Moore and his wife, met the couple as they were leaving a house of assignation in the western end of the city. Norton charged them with the crime and threatened to kill Moore on the spot. Moore put his hand to his pocket, and Norton jumped at him. A scuffle ensued, but the two were soon separated. Moore slunk away, and Norton, to avoid a further scene, started off with his wife. She refused, however, to return home with him, and he let her go. She spent the night at Moore's house.

When at death's door a year ago Norton made over all of his property, valued Both these officials, it is claimed, counscled with Hoge inmediately and discountenanced the circular and forbade its further circulation. Mr. Stone said last evening: "We have positive proof that Mr. Hoge prepared that crudar at the Grand Pacific Hotel and caused it to be sent to various divisions of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen." When asked as to the nature of the evidence, Mr. Stone refused to talk.

Notion and stoore were good friends. They were both prominent in the Society of Elks here and had been closely associated for about eight years. Two or three years ago Norton became very ill and for a long time his life was despaired tariff bill now before Congress, it will be and for a long time his life was despaired of. Taking the trade and navigation returns and dangerous illness and since his partial recovery Norton had been more attached than every to his supposed friend.

It was during his lilness that the undue intimacy between Moore and Mrs. Norton is supposed to have begun.

Mrs. Norton, before her marriage, was named Emma Stockman, and was a very handsome woman and an actress of high repute. She was born in Baltimore and was well known in this city, where she appeared ten or twelve years ago. Mr. Norton was known the country over as a successful manager and a cultivated gentleman, and a man of high character both in and out of his profession. Mr. Moore has been managing editor of the Post-Dispatch for several years and has a most estimable wife, who is now at Manitou Springs, Col., with her only child, a boy of six years.

Miss Stockman was engaged at the old Holliday Street Theatre in Baltimore as early as 1870 as a child dancer. She developed into a very pretty blonde woman of fine form, and assumed second soubstrette parts, studying hard and advancing rapidly in her profession. Her father, Fred. Stockman, kepta saloon on Marsh Market Space, near Baltimore street, and he accompanied her to and from the theatre every night. About 1878 she met John W. Norton, who was some fifteen years her senior, at Ford's Opera-House, when Norton was supporting Mary Anderson. He married her during the following season, and she went West to join the company. She has not played for a number of years.

Her marriage was supposed to be a very happy one. for the summer.

Moore has rapidly and deservedly risen in the newspaper profession. Eight years ago he came here with his wife from Philadelphia and began work as a stenographer. He was quick and industrious and was soon on the reportorial staff of the old Eccaing Post, which was later consolidated with the Dispatch. He became the trusted favorite of Mr. Pullitzer, the owner of the Post Dispatch. He became the trusted law are of Mr. Pulitzer, the owner of the Post-Dispatch, and has contributed greatly Dispatch, and has contributed greatly toward the success of that paper. He was a small blonde man, of about 37, frank in his manner and of sociable habits. He was a great favorite of the Elks' Club, and, while his integrity or his honor was never called in question, he was recognized as what may be called "fast."

Manager Norton Interviewed. In an interview last evening Manager Norton spoke quietly of the money that was taken, the hard earnings of eleven years, but speaks calmly of his wife's past record. It is only when some unhappy touch suggests her future that he winces, and one can see the great part that she played in his hopes and affections. Out at his house everything in his room has been changed. All that reminded him of her has been taken out. Once, after a rambing talk on other subjects in which it was evident his thoughts were elsewhere, he said; "I loved that boy of Moore's as much as if he had been my own." His mind was still on the comprehensive wrong that had been done. "Like a brother? Yes, sir, like a brother. Why, I trusted her with him as implicitly as a man could. I would have put my life in his hands. He was queer for the last month or two. He was moody in my company and ill at ease. I thought his paper worried him, and I asked him how I could help him, I used to try to cheer him up."

"Where do think they have gone?"

"To Australia, I think. She used to talk of going there. Then, that's Moore's country, too." His talk was slightly rambing. The thoughts were chaotic, but there was no unconcrous word against the woman, bitterly as she had wronged him. The had enten nothing. The foa was huggert but was grim with an awi'l determination. "You've read "The Stranger,' haven't you'll he asked once. "Yes."

It holds his story. In an interview last evening Manager Norton spoke quietly of the money that
